THE WEST INDIAN TRADE

Diplomatic Correspondence between London and Washington

LONDON, April 7.—The foreign office has published correspondence respecting negotiations of Great Britain and the United States for a commercial treaty, to control the white sugar market in India. The first document is a letter from Lord Granville, British foreign secretary, to Salvador West Britton minister at Washington. The letter is dated October 22, 1884. Lord Granville states that the British Government is anxious to see that the United States should not produce sugar to abolish duties on bread biscuits, butter cheese, corn meal and all kinds of flour, lumber, kerosene oil and cotton goods. He says that the United States should reduce the duty on sugar at least one half. Some of the colonies were also willing to abolish duties on sugar, but the United States refused.

London West wants to Lord Granville would date of November 20, 1884 that the United States declined a wide basis for the treaty. Also that the substance contained in the first article of the treaty would not be collected grants to any third parties under the favored nation clauses.

On the 19th of December Minister West forwarded to Lord Granville Secretary Frothingham a draft of a commercial treaty between the United States and Great Britain. In this draft the proposed document, in which 27 articles are scheduled, and it which the United States agrees to abolish the duty on sugar and to discontinue the duty on a letter accompanying the draft Secretary Frothingham indicated upon the extension of third parties to be also possible.

THE LOSS OF REVENUE.

Sir John Lubbock, M. P. estimated that the proposed treaty would cause the United States to lose the sum of $2,500,000 per annum, while the colonies would only lose $150,000. He strongly urged acceptance of the treaty by the House of Commons, and Minister West endorsed his views.

On February 12, 1885, the House of Commons wrote to Minister West that it was impossible to accept the proposals of the United States. He said they would not relinquish the duty on sugar and the provisions which govern the commerce of all nations, would render the favored nation clause a fruitless subject for dispute, and would infringe upon the national rights of the United States.

Lord Cranley the minister criticized the points of the proposed treaty. He said that he regretted it if it was compelled to reject it and his hope that an agreement would be effected sooner or later.

Lord Lismore forwarded a copy of this dispatch to the colonial office, accompanied by a note in which he said the commissions proposed by the United States were more apparent than real, and that the proposals lacked the essential elements of stability.
